

Odd Address Made at Stratford-on-Avon in the Last Century.

The following is a copy of a speech delivered by Francis Raymond at one of the Shakspearean anniversaries at Stratford-on-Avon in the last century:

Mr. Mayor and Gentlemen: The "Tempest" of applause which followed the announcement of a name so unworthy as my own has left me a bankrupt in thanks like the "Merchant of Venice." You cannot expect me to philosophize like "Hamlet," nor grateful to "Pericles." But, were I to talk myself black in the face like "Othello," my efforts would prove "Love's Labor Lost." Our worthy president and his supporters, like the "Two Gentlemen of Verona," have tried with each other to pass the evening

grateful to "Pericles." But, were I to talk myself black in the face like "Othello," my efforts would prove "Love's Labor Lost." Our worthy president and his supporters, like the "Two Gentlemen of Verona," have tried with each other to pass the evening the events of this night will serve to entertain many "A Winter's Tale," when I have passed away like "A Midsummer Night's Dream." Were I "Romeo," and Juliet" to go off with "Tullus," and Andronicus," or were I "Tullus," and Andronicus," and Juliet," I would not trouble myself about the "Taming of the Shrew," but would leave them to amuse themselves like the "Cory Wives of Windsor," and as for the "Taming of the Shrew," I am proud of "Mercurius." Nay, were I "Julius Caesar," I would not exchange my present honor to pass my "Twelfth Night" in the "Taming of the Shrew," but I fear I am trespassing unwarrantably on your time, and as I have no claims on your attention, I have only to bid you a good night, and as I am as well "That Ends Well," will conclude by offering you my sincere thanks, or you may charge me with making "Much Ado About Nothing."

rate property has become such an abuse as in New York. In many instances, the owner of a property will call this dog-in-the-manger policy—not build himself and won't let anybody else build—is but a species of the old "let the dog lie on the grass" dogeases. But in very many it is simply and purely a species of blackmail. The property owners next door or in the next block will not build, or will buy out the objectionable place only if the price is fixed far above the market rates.

One can't pay such a price as that. Why, it's twice as much as the property is worth!"

"Very well—it's my price—you can take it or leave it. I'm going to build a stable on it if you don't purchase."

And there you are. All through the heart of business New York this real estate speculation is going on. It is the case of those who would build befitting the grandeur of a great city. It is not by small holders, but by very rich ones, who are doing this. They are not even an enterprising man or big corporation desires to build a new business block anywhere, or it is almost impossible to get a permit to build, an embargo or stop the projected improvement. It may be the estate is overcrowded on ground rents, or it may be the owner is so miserably miserly that who is satisfied with present investments won't sell at all. The probability is, however, that the owner will not build because he can't afford to pay that it comes very proper under the head of blackmail. It is to pay me so much—you can't get along without my plot—it is my price, constant!

SILVER CREEK, June 25th, 1904.

WITH YOUR MICROSCOPE, BEHOLD HIM!

The miniature Tom Thumby, of the Register, has dipped his pen in a mixture of dynamic and laughing gas and written powerfully as he thinks, concerning me and what I had to say last week of his wife's Mr. Cheenault's articles on Madison county's early history. As his habit runs, this modern and semi-constituted David—no, not the old psalm singer, but the little lark who threw rocks at the glint—resorts to misrepresentation, double and longed. Notwithstanding my article was headed "A Bit Remarkable," and dealt exclusively in manifestations of surprise at his publishing the pioneer articles, giving as my reasons for surprise that the microscopic atom of the Register had so often written disparagingly of pioneer matter, and notwithstanding standing I stated explicitly that I possessed no special privileges regarding the "new news," and notwithstanding I announced my entire willingness for the atom and Mr. Cheenault to proceed with the good work, he, the microscopic substance, says he is "not advised" why I "claim a patent right to all the early history of Madison county, the relics," &c. But if the atom can't distinguish between surprise and objection it's not my fault. He entirely lodge the question of why he has heretofore always thrown cold water on every effort to advance the county's history, and now desires several columns a week to its publication. Oh, no, he can't understand why Mr. Cheenault should not desert me and my paper, both of which of him have had this matter of county history deeply at heart, and go off after strange gods, even a little tin god, made of cheap McKinley tin.

The atom admits that the Register "is a newspaper," and "publishes matter which it thinks its readers will enjoy." That is the only correct thing the atom has stated in his article. But who made the Register a newspaper?

I'll leave it to the public and the files of the paper if I am not the one who did it. When I began with the Register in 1875, it had no general news, stock, religious or market columns. All those I added, and many more, and made a paper of which the people were proud.

The atom says he likes me and wants to see me make success of my proposed book.

Yes, I see clearly, but as the frog said when the wheel ran over its head, "it's mighty strainin' on me to see it." Doubtless another David and Jonathan, Damon and Pythias case. Can't you imagine you see him with a steady, climbing up to fall my neck with that ferocious of love like unto a medium of salt gates falling from the left of a smoke-house?

The atom clearly demonstrated his interest in my effort, some time ago, when I went to Louisville on two occasions and read papers before the Fulton Club. Every daily paper in Louisville published most flattering notices and comments after the readings, and the Register, "a newspaper," mind you, gave me three lines. Think of it!

Three whole lines in the Register, a newspaper, while the city papers gave me near three hundred lines.

And further, this vest-pocket edition of Tom Thumby, "who supposed to edit" the Register, complains that I make "too many monosyllabic words." The idea of his complaining of the size of my tracks, when he can't make a track larger than that of an ant, the first name of the ant not being necessary to mention.

The Register blunderer says I am too short to discuss whether or not Tate's Edison was in Kentucky, River or Silver Creek, &c. That is a perfect natural conclusion for a man to reach, who possesses no more accuracy than a "pepper box" pistol. He always "shoots scatterin'," and like a boy on the 4th of July or Christmas, thinks it exclusively a matter of noise. As an evidence of my correctness,

I point to the reference to "Judge Cheenault," and that without initials, that the public now thinks that my old grandfather, helped to win the victory of the Revolution, and came here after the siege of Boonesborough and Bryan's Station; after Little Mountain and Blue Licks had been fought; after the Indians had been practically driven out, and the country was more than dozen years on its way to civilization. They came near the same place, he, the atom, says Mr.

Cheenault has performed an "unpleasant" task in preparing his article. It is always unpleasant for a duck to swim or a mouse to eat cheese. He says I have every year threatened to get out that book. What a Clapnet's trap! As a clincher, the atom says that "all my article is childish travelling." I am glad it is so. I am glad it is so.

I am glad it is so. I am glad it is so. I am glad it is so. I am glad it is so. I am glad it Print Shows through one of these men to make Corn must have a certain length of time to grow and mature and I have always succeeded in getting my seed, as I call it, advanced sufficiently in the season to be safe from the earliest frost in the latter part. I cultivate this field from the time it is planted until it is no longer straddle the rows with a high cultivator. I go over it as soon as after every shower as I can get on the ground with a team.

"In cultivating our corn we aim to stir the entire surface as often as possible. The shovels of the cultivators are set to run only two or three inches deep, and a team can walk along with them as easily and rapidly as with a "bugey." This is no labor connected with the traveling. I have taken a field of twenty acres of corn that, owing to a wet spring, was planted the 12th of June, and by a constant stirring of the surface of the soil, made a crop of sixty bushels of sound corn per acre.

My husband and all my children, and as soon as the plants reach a certain height, I allow me to go ahead, I run over the field five times every two weeks until my cultivator will no longer pass over the stalks.

"The corn plant is a gross feeder, and it will gutter and assimilate the plant food in the soil at a astonishing rate. If the surface is kept in a proper condition, that is, loose and mellow, as to how late in the season, or at what stage of growth cultivation should cease, can best be determined by the season itself. It should be borne in mind that in a dry season the roots of corn go down and run deep in search of moisture—I traced them to a depth of twelve feet, and that as the season advances, the surface tends to conserve this moisture, it certainly cannot be beneficial. In a wet season, however, the feeding roots spread out and run near the surface, and literally fill every foot of soil between the rows. To cut off or mangle these roots must, it is very evident, prove detrimental to the growth of the plant. Where shallow and often repeated cultivation is practiced, it will be found that the soil, just beneath this loosened top layer, is filled with fine feeding roots, and that when cultivation ceases, and the plants shade the ground, these small roots will ascend to within half an inch of the surface, and especially if repeated showers keep the soil damp a week or two. Long experience in the growth of this crop, and close observation of its manner of rooting, has satisfied me that shallow and often repeated cultivation is most effective in inducing strong and rapid growth, and that such cultivation is beneficial until the plants completely shade the ground.

A big proportion of the two or three hundred people, who attended the recent banquet to the Press Association in this city, could not help but be reminded of the Snyder Miller, and have expressed a desire to see it in print. For their benefit, and its other readers, the Capital reproduces the toast, and wishes it could reproduce the charming manner with which it was delivered. Mr. Tost-mister, Ladies and Gentlemen.—During the Administration of President Buchanan, the daughter of a prominent Senator was married at Washington. The wedding was a grand affair, attended by the President, members of the Cabinet and other noted people. At the conclusion of the ceremony Mr. Buchanan advanced to tender his congratulations to the bride, and imparted a tremendous reprimand to her lips. "Mr. President," inquired a member of Congress standing close by, "is it understood that I am not to follow suit?" "No, sir," retorted Mr. Buchanan, "it is understood that I kiss for the nation."

"Upon this occasion, ladies and gentlemen, it is understood—not that I kiss for your toast on behalf of the nation, but because of the Kentucky State Press.
